DISCUSS WEAKNESSES IN GJIROKASTER DISTRICT PARTY WORK

The third conference of the Gjirokaster District party was held during the last days of December in Gjirokaster. A total of 251 delegates, representing all the primary party organizations, participated. Sami Gjebero delivered a report analyzing party work in Gjirokaster District since the second conference, held in 1950.

In general the party work accomplished in the district was satisfactory, and important advances were made in both the political and economic sectors. Nevertheless, serious defects were noted. The bureau of the party committee adopted many decisions, but often failed to work out concrete plans for application of these decisions at the primary party organization level.

Certain sections of party, youth, and trade union organizations have continued to accomplish their tasks in a bureaucratic manner. The bureaus of the party committees have failed to exercise sufficient control over instructors in the field and to furnish them sufficient aid. The instructors themselves in many instances fail to devote sufficient time to studying the party decisions, and have difficulties in solving problems on the spot in the field.

Primary party organizations, too, have often made decisions without implementing them by assigning specific tasks to individual party members. For example, the Bodrishte primary party organization contented itself with reading decisions to the individuals concerned without distributing specific responsibilities. As a result of such negligence, 65 percent of the Communists of Gjirokaster District have been assigned no concrete or specific tasks by primary party organizations. Too often, also, the primary party organizations have adopted decisions without working out specific measures to control their application.

Party organizations and youth committees have not made sufficient efforts to enroll members in youth organizations. Only 37 percent of the young men and women of Gjirokaster District belong to the BRPSH (Union of Albanian Working Youth).

Shefqet Peci, delegate from the Central Committee, assisted in the work of the conference. He urged participants to carry the vigorous and healthy spirit marking the proceedings to their respective primary party organizations.

The conference approved the decision of the party committee plenum to remove Pandeli Caro from the plenum, because of dereliction of duty.
